Legalisation

An authorized person has to bring the original death certificate or the extract of death register to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs for the legalization. The authorized person will need to prove the relationship to the deceased (e.g. marriage certificate or confirmation issued by the Embassy). If a third person or an organization will obtain the legalization, an authorization letter issued by the Embassy or the relatives of the deceased will also be required.

Certificate of body release

The local authorities usually need a «certificate of body release» from the Embassy to retrieve the body from the hospital. In order to issue this document a confirmation of the bereaved has to be sent to the embassy indicating to whom the body can be released. This document has to be signed and sent together with a photocopy of the passports or identity card by email. If a funeral home has been assigned, they will take care of this certificate.

Abstract of the family registry

If necessary, an abstract of the family register can be ordered at the civil status office of the place of origin of the deceased approx. 5-6 weeks after the transmission of the death certificate. This document is requested in Switzerland for administrative procedures (such as insurance, survivor rent, banks etc.).

Fortune / Inheritance in Thailand

There is no public authority in Thailand in charge of managing the assets of a deceased person. The legal heirs or the concerned parties have to ask the Court to appoint an administrator for the inheritance, usually a lawyer, to arrange the assets and all necessary formalities concerned. The duty of the administrator is to allot the assets in accordance with the article 1629 of the Civil and Commercial Code (CCC). Per local customs, there is no need to appoint any administrator, if no assets of the deceased are available in Thailand. Moreover, it would be impossible to define a competent court. If there are no assets of the deceased in Thailand, then no administrator needs to be appointed. Furthermore, it would be impossible to determine a competent court.

Survivor's pension

If the deceased was registered at the Embassy, the Federal Old-Age and Survivors' Insurance OASI will be informed directly of its death. On the following link Form 318.000.2 the spouse can apply for a Survivors pension. Once the document filled out and signed, it can be sent to our Embassy for transmission to the OASI.
